Are Your Floors Tough Enough?

How would your floors hold up if 10,000 people walked across them monthly? At one Canadian sports arena, the answer was not too good—until now.

Built 20 years ago, the complex, home to hockey, karate, and other sporting events, has concrete floors that have taken a beating over the years. “[It] almost looks like some hockey games were played on the cement, instead of the ice,” says Lori Thornton, a sales representative with Swish Maintenance, a leading Jan/San distributor in Canada.

Convinced the arena’s floors could look better, Thornton suggested trying Blockade Concrete Sealer manufactured by Enviro-Solutions.

Blockade, a penetrating, water-based, repellent sealer and finish, was specifically developed for concrete floors. It is durable and provides long lasting protection.

“We applied four coats of Blockade,” says Thornton. “The first two sank right into the floor. But, by the third coat a shine appeared and by the fourth, the floor was glossing like new.”

The arena custodians are thrilled with the results, Thornton says. “They love Blockade, and just like my other customers who have tried it, they never want to use anything else again.”
